================== Fixes and creates GIF files that are confused by some viewers. Gif Fixer is a program that simply adds a.GIF file extension to your files. This way they are not opened by the default viewer. No changes are made to the original files and new files are the same size as the originals. Unzip into the folder of your choice and run GifFixer.exe to run the program. Support for GIF files with a screen resolution of at least 640x480 will be removed in a future version of GifFixer, if you want to use files with a screen resolution of 640x480 or higher you should get a GIFFixer version that supports them, which is NOT available in the current version. Please read the Posting Guidelines for further information. If you find a solution to the problem described below, please submit it here. I have updated GifFixer to fix most problems with GIF files. At the moment of version 4.1 I have not found a new problem yet. Comments below are for the problems GifFixer had with the animated GIF files. Problem 1: No screen size fix at all. Some animated GIF files just have the screen size as a "logical" size. A good example is the C-3PO sprite in Star Wars: Episode II. As the width of the picture is 4 and the height is 4. I'd suggest that your.GIF file is not an animated file or the size of the image is not at all 4 times the size of the height in pixels of the image. Problem 2: Sometimes the image doesn't fit the window. Some animations are originally created to be really high res and play from top to bottom (or left to right) and at some point they were scaled down and the animation is no longer fully displaying in the window size. The size of the window or the size of the screen after the picture is scaled down can be really confusing because the image might have no size in pixels at all. Problem 3: The picture is stretched horizontally. Some images are naturally stretched more than the width (and can even be stretched more than 3 times the width of the original image). Problem 4: The picture is stretched vertically. Some images are naturally stretched more than the height (and can even be stretched more than 3 times the height of the original image). What's New in the Gif Fixer?

GifFixer replaces the "screen resolution" of a GIF file, when opened on a viewer that supports it. Such programs as GIF record the "screen resolution" of a GIF file so it can adjust it when replayed. This allows the Gif to be used with some programs that require it to be played at a particular size. Unfortunately most of those programs have a bug that results in the GIF being replayed at a different size. A GifFixed version of the GIF looks as it was recorded by the program that generated it. It will play properly and resize properly in every program that supports displaying it. When you open IE, you normally find yourself at a login screen and here is where I found IE autofilled a couple of default, my.netscape.com for example. While I could log in manually, it would suck when I received a message of a virus or malware. I attempted to clean my cookies and cache, restarted, inspected my hosts file, added an exception, found and cleared my ActiveX etc. None worked. I reinstalled IE with no adverse effects. - The question is: what else should I check?
