It was released on 22 September 2002. It was the first album to feature new vocalist Thierry Kampwirth. To promote the album the band collaborated with Power Quest, Quest for Power, Dream Records and JVC. The cover artwork features a VHS cover of the soundtrack. The music video for the song "Fires of Magai" features a clip of the movie The Frog Prince. A reissue of the album was released in 2007, almost two years after Anglenthe's previous album Phantom and included three bonus tracks. Music and lyrics Kampwirth chose three compositions with the intent of highlighting their dynamic drummer. Music reviewer Alex Cardona found Kampwirth's interpretation "to be rather restrained compared to the original songs". He nonetheless holds appreciation of Kampwirth's performance, "Who can fall short of this power? His melodies, his tones, the imagination and the speed with which he makes his drumming shine, often making us forget about the original song. His drumming serves to complement the vocal arrangements".

"Armored Warfare is a free-to-play, cross-platform, PC-browser-based World War II real-time tactics game. It is currently in Early Access but is available to download now. The game is based on the best selling and modern warfare turn-based game, Dawn of War and is set to continue the franchise's forward-thinking and ever-evolving approach to gameplay." Singleplayer Features The BMP-1 The BMP-1 is the main fighting vehicle of the BMP series that has been in service since 1955. It is the first successful tracked vehicle in the Soviet Army, predates the M113 and is the predecessor to the universal BMP-1V. It is both a light and a heavy tracked vehicle, but the medium variant is usually the one fielded in Assault/Mechanized Battalions. These units are equipped with the AGS-17, AGS-19 and AGS-23 halftracks. The BMP-1 is armed with a 125mm ZU-23-2 cannon and either a machine gun or automatic grenade launcher, with a range of over 500 meters. The turret is protected by an APS-85 (SPG-9) and the vehicle is protected by APS-50 heavy machine guns and APS-70 small arms turrets. ZBD-86 Improved Engineering BMP-1 The ZBD-86 is a ZBD-86 kit conversion made by Teamwork-Arms. The BMP-1 kit is the most common one offered, but a ZBD-86 can be made from any BMP-1 kit available. The ZBD-86 kit upgrades the vehicle to include the ZBD-86's weapons and upgrades, and removes the OPVs and gun mantlet from the turret. The vehicle is armed with a 106mm ZU-23-2 in place of the 125mm cannon, which has a range of 300 meters. The turret is protected by a HEAT-10 launcher. It also comes with a set of weapons custom made for the BMP-1 vehicle. The BMP-1V Vehicle Cargo (C) (Hard Suit) The BMP-1V vehicle cargo (C) is the Armored Personnel Carrier of the BMP-1 family. The vehicle cargo is the upgrade from the BMP-1V and includes the BAM turret from the BMP-1A variant, the driver, the loader and
