* Software author Ed Kimball recommends, "If you have Photoshop, you can use Photoshop. If you don't have Photoshop, you can't use Photoshop." * Although the term _photoshop_ is commonly used in a generalized sense, not all types of image manipulation are called _photoshopping_. Read the documentation or ask other editors to see what terms are used to describe the image manipulation being performed. * Photoshop does not use a secret menu system; you can access every feature in the product simply by performing a quick menu command. ## Downside to Photoshop You need to understand that Photoshop is not the best editing tool for all situations. Some of the flaws in Photoshop and how to work around them are: * It uses a fixed resolution and size for raster layers that makes it difficult to accurately crop out a section of an image. * It can be difficult to see each element placed on a layer because they are all stacked on top of one another. * It is difficult to save images to another file type, such as TIFF or JPEG. Instead you use Photoshop to convert the file before saving it. * No industry-standard file formats are accepted. Photoshop does have an SVG plug-in, but it is limited in how it saves images. * It does not accept industry-standard file formats, which means you cannot open files from other programs. * Photoshop does not have a very intuitive layer-based editing system. * Photoshop does not have a built-in eraser. * Photoshop does not have a built-in cropping tool. * Photoshop does not have a selection tool that works in all directions. * Photoshop's color management is not very intuitive and does not work the same way as most other graphics editors. * The user interface has a lot of clutter and the most useful tools are buried deep inside the interface. * Photoshop is confusing for beginners. * It is expensive and unnecessary for most photographers, as there are other editing tools more suited for photo editing. ## Top Reasons to Use Photoshop Here are the top reasons to use Photoshop: * Photoshop can do everything other photo editing software can do; it is the industry standard. * Photoshop is the industry standard for retouching. * Photoshop's amount of options makes it more powerful than other products. * It is user-friendly.

Being designed for photographers and hobbyists makes it a suitable software for developers. This post shows you how to implement a simple live wallpaper with its own custom notification icon, using Photoshop Elements to edit the images needed for it. This tutorial assumes that you have a basic understanding of the Android Things Core API and the main concepts of developing an Android Things app. If you don't know anything about Android Things, it is recommended you read the tutorial The simplest possible live wallpaper. Getting the minimum software requirements The minimum software requirements of Elements 16 are as follows. Your phone can have a faster processing, but it will not likely have better performance. Your processor must support SSE3, that is, support for the operation of vector processing instructions. In recent versions of Android, SSE3 is already a requirement for launching Adobe Photoshop. (Source: Photoshop elements download page) For Android Things, the minimum requirements are as follows. If you don't have these requirements, you can download the requirements from the tutorial and the GitHub repository Setting up your environment for developing an Android Things app The first thing you need to do is download Android Studio (compatible with version 3.5 or later), set up the Android Things project and connect your phone to the development machine. This tutorial is developed using the latest version of the Google Android Studio (v3.5 or later). To set up the Android Things project, navigate to File > New > Project. A new project dialog box is displayed. In the Name and Location group, you must specify the project's name. Click Next. If the dialog box reads "Create a new project with default directory", then click the folder button at the bottom right of the dialog box. In the New folder dialog box, select the Name of the project. If you prefer to use the Android Studio template project, you can choose to import a template project and proceed. In the next dialog box, you select the Android SDK version that you want to use (defaults to the latest SDK, Android Studio 3.5), the Platform (defaults to Android 8.1), and the Project type (defaults to Android App or Android Library). Click Next. The next dialog box is for choosing the Android version that you want to support. Click

{#sp1.420} {#sp2.421} {#sp3.422} {#sp4.423} {#sp5.424} {#sp6.425} Washington (CNN) -- The Defense Department has agreed to stop using M-16 rifle cartridges that contain lead -- the same ammunition used in the AR-15, which some critics have called the symbol of the U.S. gun culture. U.S. Sen. Charles Schumer, a New York Democrat, said Tuesday the department will scrap the M-16s because they contain lead -- which can leach into the environment and contaminate sources of drinking water. He said the government had failed to come up with a substitute and that should mean no more use of the ammunition. Schumer and two other Democratic senators sent a letter to Defense Secretary Robert Gates and Army Chief of Staff Gen. George Casey asking them to stop using the M-16s. Lead can cause brain damage and reproductive defects in children. Schumer cited a study by a U.S. attorney who studied the lead levels in some Washington, D.C., drinking water. The report found lead levels in the water to be far higher than federal drinking water standards. "The use of M-16 high-velocity ammunition has been a source of controversy in communities throughout the country, and particularly in Washington, D.C. -- which has seen its water supply taken over by the Army from the 1950s until the 1990s," Schumer said. "Americans have the right to be assured that the ammunition the U.S. Army is using to kill their husbands, fathers, mothers and sons in Afghanistan is safe." Officials with the Defense Department could not immediately be reached for comment. The senators also say they want a report by the Army and Navy officials about how they plan to replace the rifle ammunition. During a debate over the U.N. arms trade treaty last week, Schumer appeared with NRA executive vice president

Q: New StringBuilder().append(next).append(next) is not appending in the correct order I am making a function that takes in the number that represents a month and then makes a calendar and I have this function below. The function takes the input and then adds the days to it but my output is not writing on the page the way that I wrote it. Ex: int number = 1; Calendar.set(year, month, number); Output: 2015-01-06 Expected: 2015-01-01 public static void addDays(int year, int month, int number) { final StringBuilder output = new StringBuilder(); Calendar cal = new GregorianCalendar(year, month, number); int day = cal.getActualMaximum(Calendar.DAY_OF_MONTH); int fullDays = day - number; int printedDays = fullDays/30; int remainder = fullDays % 30; for (int i = 0; i 0) { output.append(" "); for (int i = 1; i
