What's new:

is an In-Depth Guide to ALL Dog Behaviors. Why do Dogs Do What They Do? Dogs are a great group - they are sociable, warm, happy, and social (helping others when they see someone they like, seeking people out to socialize, and willing to share affection). However, there are times when it can seem like their social nature and tendency towards helping others can get in the way. Like humans, dogs can show more of their real self when they are suffering. When they don't like who they think you are, or when something or someone makes them afraid, they may act a little differently. However, despite what they may seem like on the outside, inside they may be very loving and caring beings, wanting only the best for you and for their packmates. Just as with humans, dogs can carry their troubles and show them to others. This is where we come in. All dogs -- no matter how great or bad -- deserve an owner who loves them and treats them with respect. When it comes to canine behavior, there are a series of things to understand. Puppies need learning and practice to get to a point where they can be responsible for themselves -- and at the same time, be able to carry in their maturity and love for their owner and their family. Ensuring this growth and development through well-designed programs also helps them enjoy their lives and gives them the loyalty and love they need. For every dog, there are three simple things that they need to know: Permissions Training Fostering These are the "three basics" which can stop a lot of problems happening. If we avoid ignoring any of them, we can insure that the dog ends up having a happy, healthy, and well-adjusted life. If you want to learn more about any of these topics, make sure to get the complete series of Dog Clicker DVD's.
